Overview

A little boy picks up a little stone he finds on the beach and wants to find the perfect home for it. He wanders around different locations where there are stones of all shapes and sizes but to no avail.

After a long day, he goes home and puts the little stone on his nightstand among his other found treasures. Does little stone feel differently about this particular spot? How come?

A cute little story that shows the importance of being with those we love no matter the location and that what sets us apart can also bring us closer.
